DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 5-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Applicant's Admitted Prior Art (APA).

The admitted prior art (Fig 1a; Page 1) discloses a stacked semiconductor chip package comprising: a substrate (11), a first chip (12) mounted on the substrate and electrically connected to the substrate by a plurality of electrical leads (wires, not labeled), a second chip (14) electrically connected to said substrate by a plurality of leads (wires, not labeled) and having two opposed longitudinal sides defining a first length, a plate (13) mounted between the first and the second chip and having two opposed longitudinal sides corresponding the two longitudinal sides of the second chip defining a second length; wherein the first chip has two opposed longitudinal sides defining a third length, said second chip has two traverse sides defining a first width, the plate further has two opposed traverse side defining a second width smaller than the first width, and the first chip further has two traverse sides defining a third width.

APA does not appear to disclose the second length being larger than the first length to expose the opposed longitudinal sides of the plate, the first chip with two longitudinal sides defining a third length larger than the second length, or that the second width is smaller than the third width.

In any case, it would have been an obvious matter of design choice bounded by well known manufacturing constraints and ascertainable by routine experimentation and optimization to choose these particular dimensions because applicant has not disclosed that the dimensions are for a particular unobvious purpose, produce an unexpected result, or are otherwise critical, and it appears prima facie that the process would possess utility using another dimension. Indeed, it has been held that mere dimensional limitations are prima facie obvious absent a disclosure that the limitations are for a particular unobvious purpose, produce an unexpected result, or are otherwise critical. See, for example, In re Rose, 220 F.2d 459, 105 USPQ 237 (CCPA 1955); In re Rinehart, 531 F.2d 1048, 189 USPQ 143 (CCPA 1976); Gardner v. TEC Systems, Inc., 725 F.2d 1338, 220 USPQ 777 (Fed. Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 830, 225 USPQ 232 (1984); In re Dailey, 357 F.2d 669, 149 USPQ 47 (CCPA 1966).

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed April 29, 2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's contends that criticality is established through the specification. Applicant points to several lines that disclose that due to the size of a chip, a testing instrument cannot detect the thickness of "the adhesive layer" and by having the side length of a plate larger than the sides of a chip, "the adhesive" thickness can be detected. Applicant's arguments are moot, because it purports a benefit that cannot be obtained by the device structure as claimed. There is no claimed adhesive layer in the device structure, as such any argument based on providing a benefit to a layer that doesn't exist in the device is moot.
